Incidents.

—Regular meeting of the common council this evening.

—Special meeting of the Janesville Sack company this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

—Among the unsold crops of tobacco is the product of the Rager farm, on the middle road to Johnston.

—The Mutual Improvement club hold a regular meeting in the parlors of All Souls church this evening.

—Crystal Temple of Honor No. 32 hold a regular meeting this evening in their lodge room, Judd block.

—Supper will be served from 6 to 9 o'clock at the Christmas market at Cannon's hall, Wednesday evening.

—For Christmas presents, money can be well invested at the Christmas market, at Cannon's hall, Wednesday evening.

—Mr. J. A. Denniston, the West Milwaukee street tanyer, is in Chicago today, purchasing goods for the holiday trade.

—Marshall Hogan captured a noisy city drunk yesterday morning, just about the time good people were on their way to church.

—There is a little too much snow on the river to make good skating, and most skaters prefer indoors and the little rollers.

—Our tobacco warehouses begin to show signs of activity, many of them opening up with a full force of sorters and packers.

—Have you seen the stock of rings shown by Webb & Hall? The variety is large, and quality unexcelled. Prices lower than ever.

—Quite a number of drunks were noticed on the streets yesterday—indicating that the "bottle trade" on Saturday night must have been extra good.

—The Rev. E. M. Dunn, of Milton, occupied the pulpit of the Congregational church, yesterday morning, and delivered a very practical and instructive sermon.

—R. W. King has received Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for January—a number rich in reading and in illustrations. For the money—25 cents a number—it is the cheapest and best magazine in the world.

—The China boys, who are members of the First M. E. church Sunday school, have presented the ladies with two elegant artificial bouquets, for the sale at the Christmas market at Cannon's hall, Wednesday afternoon and evening.

—The great event of this week will be the charity ball given by the Sack company, at the Guards' armory on Thursday evening Dec. 18th. A good number of tickets have been disposed of and the occasion will be one of pleasure to all who attend.

—Henry Dixon and Peter Beaver were arrested Saturday evening for drunkenness. This forenoon they were brought before the municipal court and pleaded guilty to the charge. Dixon was sent to jail for three days, and Beaver was fined one dollar and the costs of his arrest, which he paid.

—Quite a number of people hitched up their teams this morning and ventured out on runners, but were soon convinced that the snow was too light for any comfort, and their sleighs were quietly slipped out of sight to await a little more of the "beautiful."

—Our citizens will not forget the lecture to be given by Helen M. Gougar, at Leppin's hall on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week. The lecturer comes to Janesville with the best of recommendations as a public speaker, and her subject, "Woman's Suffrage a National Necessity," being of much interest, she ought to have a large audience. Admission 25 cents; family tickets 50 cents.

—This morning, while working in the wood yard of Messrs. Gateley & King, near the old Clow reaper works, Mr. Gateley found four pairs of new boots, stowed away in a pile of wood. The boots had evidently been placed there previous to the snow storm, as no tracks were visible. Marshall Hogan was informed, but at this time none of our dealers claim the property. The boots were evidently stolen and hid by the thief.

—The First M. E. church, one of the old pioneer societies of the city, are making extensive arrangements for a Christmas market, which will be open to the public at Cannon's hall Wednesday afternoon and evening of this week. Useful and ornamental articles will be for sale and a good supper furnished. The admission is free, and the invitation broad. This society seldom calls upon the people for any patronage in a public way and the Christmas market is entitled to liberal support which it will undoubtedly receive.

—We have been threatened to-day with several poems on the first drop of snow. There's nothing like a corner, but and a snow shovel to tame the poetic vision and inspire the poetaster with some practical ideas in regard to this white adieu of winter. The beautiful snow assumes business proportions when you follow it up with a shovel before breakfast, and wonder why you always live on the side of the street that attracts the most of it. If our wife should sit in the parlor, manufacturing poetry, while we were breaking our back in a vain effort to comply with the city ordinance, in the exercise of a snow shovel, we should pronounce her a suitable subject for Belva Lockwood or St. John.

—The "Wide Awakes" were royally entertained in the rooms of the Young Men's Christian association last Saturday afternoon, by the temperance ladies who have the work in charge. The little people went home happy, and the ladies had occasion to rejoice in the fact that successful temperance work may be effectively carried on even in these perilous times. Janesville is favored in having a woman's temperance organization, composed of practical, zealous workers, untrammelled by a fanatical element, which burdens so many similar organizations. Good morals, clean hands and a pure life, will tell in the years to come and do more for the cause of temperance than all the National temperance legislation that any of us will ever live to witness.

—Phillip Chock, Jr., department commander, Grand Army of the Republic, for Wisconsin, has issued an order announcing that the Nineteenth annual encampment of the department of Wisconsin will be held at Madison on the 23d of January, 1885. Headquarters will be at the Capital house, where the council of administration will meet at 9 a. m., sharp, on the 22d. The first session of the encampment will open at 1 p. m. on the 23d. All sessions of the encampment and the Women's relief corps will be held in Turner's hall building. Arrangements have been made with all the railways in the state so that those attending the encampment and Women's relief corps will pay full fare to Madison and will be entitled to return for one-fifth fare on presentation at the ticket office of the several railway companies of a certificate signed by the assistant adjutant general. These certificates will be procured of the assistant adjutant general at the encampment and will be good until Monday, the 26th. Rates at the Capital house during the encampment will be $1.50 per day.

—The residents of North Jackson street were treated to a little excitement Saturday evening, in the way of an old-fashioned run-away, which resulted in demolishing a lumber wagon, upsetting a cow, and causing the German job to swear in several different languages. About five o'clock in the afternoon, the team stood in front of a saloon on Milwaukee street, patiently waiting for the driver to fill up. He appeared beyond his expectations, and when he came out to start for home, the horse had anticipated his wishes and gone ahead; they crossed the railroad at a lively gait, and collided with an innocent cow in front of Mr. Saxton's residence, the gentle bovine and the wagon became wonderfully mixed up in a very short time, while the horses shipped out for Evansville, with the two front wheels of the vehicle. They were captured in the vicinity of the cemetery by Mr. Woodruff, and brought back to the wreck and turned over to the driver, who had just put in an appearance. He said, "I shoost stopp'd do light mine bime down town, and de tam horses runned away, vat vill mine poss ven I gits home vantz." Some of the neighbors turned out and borrowed a wagon for him and started him home. Run aways are good things for wagon makers. The one on Jackson street Saturday night will prove a bonanza judging from the wreck which ornamented the street yesterday.

Personal.

—Mrs. Miles Hunt, wife of Conductor Miles Hunt, has returned home from an extended visit with relatives in Dakota.

—Mr. Thos. W. Johnson returned home on Saturday from a very successful business trip in the interest of the Empire Cross Spring company, of this city.

Her wide circle of friends in Janesville will heartily wish her a most pleasant visit to the land of perpetual fruitage, and a safe return to her home.

—Mr. E. C. Stearns, of Stearns & Baker, druggists, West Milwaukee street, went to Chicago this morning for the purpose of purchasing a second invoice of holiday goods for their store, the first purchase being about exhausted. They will have an entire new stock in a few days.

—Mr. L. D. Robinson, who has been a popular salesman for some years with Mr. Fred Scoville, of the Star clothing, left to-day for Richmond Center, where he has accepted a position in the store of M. C. Smith. Mr. Robinson's many friends in Janesville will wish him continued prosperity in his new home.

Charity.

The thought of Charity implies want. When an able-bodied man steps into your place of business, and presents a well worn pass book or subscription paper of the regulation type, you give him a nickel or decline, and in either case turn away disgusted with the remark, "Why don't the fellow go to work!" This class of mortals as a rule, are not objects of Charity. The best way to help any man or woman, in needy circumstances, who is able to work, is to furnish them means of employment, and this kind of assistance is always appreciated by the honest poor.

There are, however, in all cities a class of needy people, who, by force of circumstances, or misfortune, are placed in a condition of absolute want, and yet they manage to exist from day to day without advertising their condition, or putting themselves in the way of being assisted. Many of the people are not only needy, but also helpless as far as doing anything for themselves is concerned. Janesville is more fortunate than many cities of the same size in this respect, and yet we are not entirely destitute of worthy poor people who need our help and sympathy. The charity party which is to be given by the Sack company in the Guards' armory next Thursday evening, has for its sole object, benevolence. The tickets are selling rapidly, and the hall will undoubtedly be crowded with an appreciative audience.

To the Editor.

Please correct error in your issue of Saturday, for the benefit of my many friends, who are constant readers of your paper. The above entitled case is not on trial. I was called home from my business in the west by my attorneys, who had positive assurance that my case would be tried in its turn; defendants and their attorney had the same information. Saturday, the above case was called, defendants attorney on the plea that he had other engagements that would suffer, but the case put off one month, to January 13th, 1885. We are, and have been ready to try the case in court for more than two years, after having begun in vain for a settlement from the defendants, in accordance with terms of a written contract, for over three years.

"ECONOMY IS WEALTH."

How to go through a Hard Winter on One Ton of Coal.

The man who handed down to posterity the old maxim at the head of this column was undoubtedly a wise man; he might have been wealthy, but if he was, it is safe to assume that he amassed his fortune before economy had been experimented with, to any great extent. At least, a number of people have practiced the virtue since without becoming imitated to any alarming degree. The man who thoroughly enjoys economy is usually possessed of money; he is able to do short of everything else, including comfort, and luxury, of any kind, he considers an abomination. This kind of a man will tell you, with an air of supreme satisfaction, how little money it has cost him to go to church for the last ten years, and if you ask him how much he has spent in the manufacturing interests of the city, he will assume an insulted air and ask if you think he is foolish enough to take any chances of that kind. Government bonds and first mortgage notes are shaky enough for him. His wife is always a weak, modest little body, who never spends a cent without being reminded that extravagance is a downright sin. His children—well, this kind of a man never has any children; he can't afford the luxury.

"Get all you can, and keep all you get," is always posted in the crown of his hat and observed to the letter.

In conversation with one of these "economy" mortals not long ago, he asked the question, "How much coal do you burn in the course of the winter?"

"Oh," we said, "in the neighborhood of ten tons."

"Ten tons," he continued, with perfect astonishment, "why, man, where do you burn it?"

"In the house, mostly," was answered, "Occasionally the children have a bon fire out in the back yard, but the most of it is used in the house."

After regarding his breath he said: "Well, I call that shameful extravagance; my house is about as large as yours, and one ton of coal is all we can use for heating purposes."

"Have no trouble in getting warm?" we suggested, in a tone that implied doubt.

"None in the least," he said, "you don't understand how to burn coal."

We said that was probably so, and with his permission we would come over some evening and take a lesson.

"That's right, come right along; we are always at home, and I can give you some points on economy that will be worth money to you," he said.

We handed him a cigar, which he put in his pocket carefully, with the remark, that he would save it to smoke after his Christmas dinner.

A few evenings later, when the wind was howling around us as he sat with the mercury down around zero outside, and the children complaining of the heat, after a romp around the rooms in a summer heat temperature, we said, "Write out your coal and ear muffs, we are invited out to see a coal stove that has a faculty of running all winter on one ton of coal; we may be able to gain some information that will help to make us suddenly wealthy." With a skeptical smile which indicated lack of confidence in the bonanza results, she was soon ready, and a few minutes after eight o'clock in answer to a violent pull at the door bell, we were admitted into the hall of the house where resided the man of practical economy. The atmosphere was damp and frost glistened on the white walls, causing us involuntarily to turn up our coat collar and keep our mittens. The greeting was also a little chilly and ended with the remark that they were glad to see us, although they were about to retire which they usually did in cold weather about half past eight o'clock.

Our parlor is not open he continued, come right through to the sitting room. This room contained his wife, and the famous stove, the former with a shawl around her shoulders and a red flannel bandage around her neck as the result of a severe cold which she captured in church the Sunday before by sitting in an overheated room. The stove had not attended church, but it had evidently taken cold and no remedies were being applied for its relief. Occasionally a dull red coal was to be seen, which was the only indication that the fire had not expired, as we took a chair close by the non producer of heat, in a vain effort to work up a little warmth the hostess said to his wife:

"Maria, when was the stove shaken last?"

"Why, Julius," she replied, "you ought to remember, yesterday was Friday, you know we always shake the stove Friday morning and then again Sunday before dinner."

"Turning to us, he said enquiringly, 'if it seems a little cold here for you, I will open this small draft,' and he stood ready to execute the deed."

"No, don't for anything in the world," we said, between a gasp and a sneeze, "we won't remain long, and the house might become uncomfortably warm, and spoil your night's rest."

"A good suggestion," he remarked, as he sat down and told us how the fire never went out in that stove from the time it was started, the first of December, until they took it down the middle of March.

We chatted for a few minutes and went home to get warm; we got back some mild evening and examined that stove. In the mean time, if we had one ton of coal to go through the winter on, we should have all the fun possible using it up before New Year's, and then try and induce some friend to pass us down to New Orleans for the balance of the winter.

"An Alleged Bad Oyster."

The Chicago Item-Ocean, of Sunday contains the following notice of the failure of F. W. Brodie, who formerly ran the Sea-Side oyster house in this city: "F. W. Brodie, who for several years past has been engaged in the oyster trade in Chicago, sold out his business Thursday to a relative-in-law, and left the city. What was much worse, according to the commercial agencies, he left numerous customers to whistle for a settlement. His stock, at No. 79 Dearborn street, was transferred to W. H. Gray, whose wife is said to be a sister of Brodie's wife. Brodie, it is said, has been running his business on a scale much larger than his means warranted, and for weeks past he has been underselling the market. He has not been forced with much credit in Chicago during the past year, but seems to have held in favor with eastern dealers. To Baltimore he is reported to owe $50,000, Hemingway & Co. of that city, alone being creditors to the amount of $12,000. In Chicago he owes about $3,000. One of his creditors here is G. E. Peck, a milk dealer, for $1,600. The other principal creditors are in New York, Perth Amboy, and Annapolis. The Chicago Evening Journal said on an advertisement in the superior court to recover $33.76 from Brodie and the Joseph Stockton company was served as garnishment. During the present season, it is alleged, Brodie has taken advantage of good business to do a big trade, but has for several weeks been selling oysters at $1 per gallon, which is below actual cost to dealers here. He had lunch stoves at Janesville, Wis., and on the west side, and was supposed to have assets worth from $17,000 to $20,000. It is understood that Brodie is now in Minneapolis, where, it is said, he has already opened business as C. L. Brodie & Co. "C. L." is for Calvin L., which is the name of his wife, Mr. Gray, successor to Brodie, refused to say anything in regard to the matter."

Death of Albert Zeiminger.

The Wichita (Kansas) Daily Eagle, of December 5th, comes to hand containing the following obituary notice of Albert Zeiminger, who formerly lived in this city, being then known as Albert Wicoh. Deceased was a nephew of Mrs. E. Zeiminger, of this city:

CUT OFF IN HIS PRIME.

Over how many homes will a single death at times cast a gloom, and how many hearts weigh down in sadness. The untimely death of Albert Zeiminger is one of these. His own loving wife and tender and lovely child, the home of his mother and the loving hearts there, and the home of his own sister and those of his well sisters and half brothers will all sorrow over the death of one bright and promising man. Mrs. Wm. Wicoh and her daughter returned home yesterday from Ashton from the funeral of her eldest son, who died at the age of 27 years of typhoid malaria. All the love of a wife, all the tender care of a mother, all the skill of two physicians availed nothing. He breathed his last on Monday morning, and was buried on Tuesday near his home, in which he and his young wife had looked forward to spending so many happy and prosperous days, but alas, the shadow fell across its threshold. Albert Zeiminger, who is well known in this community, was born in Rockford, Illinois, in 1858. With his young wife he went into Kalamazoo county six years ago, where his nearest neighbor was ten miles away. He and his younger brother built themselves valuable homes. With his mother, sister and brothers, our people will sympathize, especially with his young wife, who is left to mourn and sigh with her memories of vanished happy days.

Why should man's high aspiring mind
Ere in his youth be laid to rest?
When all his bright life's work is done,
He lies in silence, pale to death.
The fair, the brave, the rich, the wise,
The rich, the poor and great and small
Are such but words to comfort him,
And how he quiet hall.

"I gladly testify to the merits of Albert Zeiminger as a specific for rheumatism. A. Meyers, driver for U. S. Express Co., N. Y."
